Dear Daniel,

We know that in these turbulent times the future may seem uncertain. Now more than ever, we need to prepare the best and brightest of our young people to lead this country. We need a new generation of leadership that will find original and innovative solutions to the complex challenges facing us. At this pivotal juncture in American history, we need a cadre of creative, smart, and fearless young people poised to change the world.

The Posse Foundation is helping to meet this need by identifying, recruiting and training a dynamic new network of leaders that will represent the true diversity of this country and more accurately reflect the concerns and the dreams of all Americans.

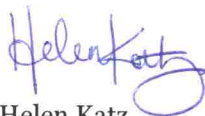

Derron Wallace's inspired words above embody the Posse ideal. When we provide outstanding young leaders from urban public schools a first-rate education, we prepare them to become leaders in the workforce and agents of change in society. Having won the prestigious Fulbright Scholarship and Watson Fellowship, Derron is a testament to the success of the Posse Program. Like thousands of other Posse Scholars, he is helping to increase diversity in the educational pipeline while maintaining the highest standards.

By January 2009, The Posse Foundation's partner universities will have awarded 2,600 leadership scholarships to deserving public high school students. We are proud to share with you highlights of six other amazing Posse Scholars, who like Derron, represent the next generation of leaders.

Your support of The Posse Foundation guarantees our mission to promote excellence, equity and diversity in higher education and the workforce. This is an investment that can only have a positive outcome.

All of us in the Posse community would like to take this opportunity to thank you for your belief in the Posse Program and our Scholars.

Warmly,

Helen Katz
